

I prefer XM radio over the mundane broadcast radio that is available in my area. Why should I have to listen to commercial after commercial? Why are you attempting to take away something that I feel is worth paying for each month? Why should I be limited as to where I can access traffic and weather related data? Just as I am able to pay for cable or satellite TV, I should be able to pay for XM radio and the features I receive with my XM radio should not be limited. I am sure that the big radio execs are shaking in their boots now that consumers have the option to listen elsewhere - they are able to deliver ads to a smaller segment now and must charge less as a result. That is their problem - not mine and not the governments. Give consumers the choice... let them decide! If they wish to pay for XM, let them benefit from the features. Maybe the radio execs will take a good hard look at their stations and make them more appealing as a result.
